

Glasses Saved The Day

A HAPPY MAN - (that he can still see) is Austin Ashley (right), who is showing his 'completely shattered' safety glasses to grounds supervisor Henry Luethans, right after a recent near calamity. Austin was using an edging machine, trimming the grass in front of the IM Building. Suddenly, a rock (it felt like a mountain, though it was only about an inch wide) struck his left eye. Luckily, Austin was wearing the safety glasses the company had furnished him. Without the glasses, he would have had a black eye for sure, and even more serious, might have lost the sight of that eye. He'll be wearing safety glasses from now on for sure. Will you?

HIGH MARCH

Published by ARO, Incorporated, operating contractor for ARNOLD ENGINEERING DEVELOPMENT CENTER

EDITOR: Jack Jones, Room A-340, Ext. 586

CORRESPONDENTS; George Brons, Don Boyd, Gladys Kennedy, Irene Witty, Agnes Burkhalter, Jim O'Neill, Bob Thompson, Lois Stooksbury, Johnny Herrmann, Dottie Shaw, Olivine Rayburn, Martha Wiseman, Mary Anne Kamm, Martha James, Marie Pugh, Sue Barton, Joe Moriarty, Laverne Elder, Lt. Bob Essig, Brownie Kincus and Mary Lynn Uselton.