AEDC team looks back on a year of giving

Government sequestration affects more organizations than most people realize. The Franklin County High School (FCHS) National Defense Cadet Corps (NDOC) formally the FCHS Air Force Junior ROTC, was in need of cadence uniforms to support their Raider Team due to the government sequestration when the AEDC Logistics Division offered the school mobility gear.

The AEDC Logistics Division was able to donate more than 400 obsolete mobility gear items to the Franklin County High School NDCC at no cost to either party. As the Logistics Division conducted a materials inventory, they discovered mobility gear that was no longer useful to the mission. The mobility gear the high school received included desert coats, desert hats, parkas, trousers as well as other items.

“These particular items were obsolete and no longer in use,” said Tracy Carter, an AEDC support agreements manager in the Test Support Division Logistics Office. “It’s a pretty common practice to reach out to the local military community to see if there is a need prior to submitting a formal request to DRMO (Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office) for disposal of obsolete items. An organization who needs the gear will receive it at no cost and we clear out warehouse space.”

“I’m glad we could assist.” Obsolete government items are disposed through a process involving the completion of paperwork as well as the logistics of transporting and delivering the items through the Defense Logistics Agency.

Sutton’s retirement to ‘Fire Chief’

Because of John Sutton’s retirement, AEDC Fire Chief Daryle Lopes and the B-shift firefighters made Sutton an honorary AEDC Fire Chief for the Day. This fulfilled a childhood dream Sutton had harbored since grade school when a local fire department visited his school. After the presentation, driver/operator Ken Locker took Sutton for a brief ride in Engine One. Pictured are Sutton standing tall in the chief’s seat (B-shift leader; left) while FCHS Aerospace Science Instructor and retired Chief Master Sgt. Everett Smith (left) provides supervision. In Fiscal Year 2013 (Oct. 1, 2012-Sept. 30, 2013), the AEDC team gave $156,834 to charities, civic organizations, education and disaster relief. Education was the biggest beneficiary of company contributions, as AEDC donated $71,085 for educational support during the fiscal year.

In 2013, AEDC also created a new scholarship program for employee dependents who are pursuing a career in vocational education related to the mission and operations at Arnold Engineering Development Complex (AEDC); drafting and CAD; machine tool technology; mechatronics; heating, ventilation, air conditioning and refrigeration; welding; industrial electricity; and industrial maintenance.

As part of the ATA Vocational Technology Scholarship Program, three students receive $1,000 scholarships annually and those are renewable.

Team Arnold.

As we close out another historic year at Arnold Air Force Base, I encourage each of you to take time to reflect on your accomplishments. Together, we achieved one of the most challenging years in our history. We accomplished a year on a continuing mission (CRM) which dramatically reduced our fiscal flexibility and adhered to the CRM with sieze, which left little margin for error.

Throughout all of this turmoil, each and every one of you kept your eye on the mission and just as importantly, on each other. I couldn’t be more proud of how you performed under such circumstances and I sincerely thank you.

As a traditional year comes to a close, testing will be suspended during the Christmas holiday. I hope everyone will have the opportunity to take time off with family and friends, a perfect time to place the year behind us all to increase or wide. I hope all of our test work continued to support the needs of our nation.

I encourage you to prioritize your time over the holidays to decompress and enjoy the time we have with our loved ones. I am proud to serve the best defense is a good offense. When you do your job right, you enjoy the fruits of your labor.

As we begin 2014, we are excited to continue the work of the past year.

The Air Force announced an award rating of AFPR 2013 for the Coating Contractor, ATA, for the period April 1, 2013 through September 30, 2013. In a note to the ATA workforce, General Manager Steve Paran said, “We are proud of all our personnel and how they have performed during the past year through a tough year. I want to thank each of you for your commitment and dedication. The ATA team manages over 200 sites in their maintenance and reliability training, document control, and program management.”

courageously committed in the AEDC mission and its future.

Sutton: There’s no doubt that major changes are in AEDC’s future. I’ve always been mindful that it’s the expertise within our operating contractor work force that makes AEDC what it is today. As an Air Force civilian, we have a special responsibility to ensure senior leadership outside the fence understands that very important difference when compared to most Air Force bases.

HMM: Any additional comments?

Sutton: It would be impossible to thank everyone who invested time making me a better employee and how to thank everyone to all the organizations that have a military influence and steady hand on the people and community. That certainly brings home every two weeks. It was probably five years old when I first took a tour of AEDC. I remember I had a hard time figuring them into those large wind tunnels and especially how they flew them around those sharp turns. In 1979, I returned to AEDC as a cooperative education student. I liked it so much, I came on board as a full time employee. Shortly after that, I met my future wife, Michelle. We were married in early 1982 and both of us have continued working here since then. While I can never repay the Air Force for all the good things it has made possible, I can say that my family and I will always be grateful.

HMM: What are your plans for the future?

Sutton: I really have made no plans at this time. Being forced to move as soon as I was told will be a major challenge. From there, it was a garden. From there, it was a road with obstacles and new ideas. To perform work that will continue the best in the world at what they do.

HM: How will you remember the relationships you have developed here and the culture that you have created?

Sutton: I probably owe more to the Air Force and AEDC than any other place that I’ve worked here that works that are simply better. I probably owe more to the Air Force and AEDC than any other place that I’ve worked here that works that are simply better. I probably owe more to the Air Force and AEDC than any other place that I’ve worked here that works that are simply better.

What will be your fondest memories of your time at AEDC?

Sutton: I’d say those are the times when I’ve worked with the people and community.
ATA General Manager Steve Pearson. “Their knowledge, skills and abilities are critical to facility and test support at AEDC, and this program supports training toward that level of expertise.”

For all other company donations, the decisions are made by a group of employees elected by their peers. ATA’s Employee and Community Activities Committee (E&CAC) meets monthly to discuss requests from area schools, athletic and civic groups.

“The committee is made up of employees with equal representation based on where the employee resides,” said E&CAC President Christy Brunner. “This makeup ensures that all areas have representatives who live in their area and have interest in ensuring all local areas are equally considered for monetary disbursements provided by ATA. “The local communities have supported the work being performed by ATA and its fellow contractors for many years. Supporting businesses, charities, fundraisers and many other local activities allow us to show our appreciation on behalf of ATA and our willingness to provide assistance wherever it is needed.”

ATA employees also showed their generosity during Fiscal Year 2013 by giving $63,925 to surrounding areas. About $35,000 went to the employee-funded ATA Charities Program (ATACP). Contributions are made on an annual basis and deducted from regular paychecks throughout the year or by a one-time payment.

The ATACP includes the Wounded Warrior Project, American Heart Association, American Cancer Society, area hospice, area children’s advocacy and local charities that provide food for needy children (on weekends and holidays during the school year) and other groups who provide school supplies – a total of 25 charities in all.

When national calamities hit Texas, New Jersey and Oklahoma, employees wanted to contribute. So, ATA offered workers the opportunity to donate vacation time which was then converted to dollars and given to areas needing disaster relief. The largest was a check sent to the American Red Cross for $14,695.

Later in the year, many ATA employees donated their award fee check to help more people suffering because of natural disasters.

“Our employees and the company have always felt the responsibility to help others in need,” said Pearson. “Additionally, we have focused on helping schools by promoting science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) programs as well as vocational education programs. Our disaster relief donations to West Texas and Moore, Oklahoma, actually went to their school systems because it’s easy for them to be forgotten, but they need the help to provide meals and school supplies for those impacted.”

ATA currently employs 1,700 people and is one of the largest employers in the area.
The AEDC Company Grade Officer’s Council donated $2,560 among four organizations after conducting the annual AEDC Turkey Trot 5K run and 1.5 mile walk last month.

The Keith Springs Volunteer Firefighters, Operation Stand Down of Nashville, and the Good Summit in Tullahoma received donations of $550 each as a result of funds raised from the Turkey Trot. The AEDC Children’s Christmas Party received a $500 donation.

More than 80 AEDC personnel and individuals from the surrounding communities participated in the Turkey Trot and the winners of each age and gender division received a turkey.

More than 80 AEDC personnel and individuals from the surrounding communities participated in the Kids for Christmas event held on Saturday, Dec. 14. The AEMTC, ATA and the Arnold Community Council (a support group for AEDC) all made donations. The money raised helped foster children buy gifts and supplies for their loved ones.

AEDC Public Affairs

There is a little friendly competition among the groups at AEDC’s Kids for Christmas. Each has a competition to try to see who can donate the most money. This year, the AEMTC, ATA and the Arnold Community Council raised $1,384 from one of these events (known in Range C, Painte or as “TFT (Engine Test Facility) always comes close to beating us so it’s an even game (Propulsion Wind Tunnel) is a tough competitor. I expect both TFT and PFT will raise more than $1,000 each this year.”

Evelyn Carden, the wife of Tullahoma’s mayor, works with the Department of Children’s Services to contact foster parents and invite kids to participate.

Collierville County Mayor David Pennington provides a room at the Collierville Administrative Plaza for the day. Everyone meets at the plaza, and volunteers take the kids to Walmart to buy their Christmas presents.

After shopping, kids return to the plaza for a pizza party, to wrap gifts and sing Christmas carols. Then, Santa Claus stops by for a visit. Painter’s team buys 26 pizzas, cases of water and other drinks and buys wrapping paper, bows, tags and boxes.

If there is any money left over, they take a family or indivdual in need shopping or help a family who has a sick child with serious medical problems. One year, they gave to a family whose house had burned the week before Christmas. It was the only thing they had left and it seems like it’s all about the kids. They always do a great job leading the effort for the union, and I am so proud of our AEDC family for the way they contribute to any worthy cause,” he said. “I’ve worked at AEDC for 42 years and it has been like this since I started. People are always ready to give and help.”

Nance says he thinks the kids are learning an important lesson through Kids for Christmas. “We live in a society where sometimes it seems like it’s all about me.” Through AEMTC and other AEDC employees, these foster kids are learning how good it feels to give.”

Painter first became involved in Kids for Christmas in 2001, because the group leader in 2003 and now, ten years later, Painter says this the event is something she looks forward to every year.

“When I first started doing the event, my daughter was eight years old, and I took her with me to help teach her that we all need to help others and try to make their Christmas a little happier,” Painter said.

Shortly after she began working with Kids for Christmas, Painter and her husband decided they wanted to be foster parents. They did this for a few years before busy schedules forced them to stop. She says being a foster parent brings a mixture of emotions—happiness, stress, sadness and love. One thing she is grateful for is the daughter she gained through the foster care system.

“She was adopted because they said her he wouldn’t return next year because he was being let go. ‘Let me tell you, it is all you can do to keep from breaking down and crying right there over how happy they are at that moment.”

Last year Kids for Christmas gave each child $130 to spend. Money was still being collected at press time for the Dec. 14 event.

DAYTON, Ohio – The world’s largest military aviation museum is ready to build new addition

The National Museum of the U.S. Air Force is set to expand its legacy with a new 224,000 square foot building to be constructed by Turner Construction Co. of Washington, D.C.

The contract for the museum’s newest building, which will be similar in size and shape to those existing hangars, was awarded by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Louisville District, for the amount of $35.426 million, and is being privately financed by the Air Force Museum Foundation, a non-profit organization chartered to assist in the development and expansion of the museum’s facilities.

Current plans call for construction to begin in late spring 2014 and be completed in the summer of 2015. The museum will then begin populating the building that fall. A public opening is anticipated in late 2015.

According to Museum Director and retired Lt. Gen. Jack Hudson, the fourth building will provide more educational opportunities, increase visitor access to the presidential and research and development aircraft and improve visitor experience with space exhibits and large aircraft. “We’re extremely excited about the fourth building because this new facility will help us to further tell the Air Force story with much needed exhibit space and also provide dedicated educational areas for programs based in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM),” Hudson said. “There will be opportunities for visitors of all ages, but a special emphasis will be placed on programs that inspire and motivate our youth toward an Air Force or STEM career.”

The new climate-controlled building, with LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) 3.0 Silver certification, will house four major elements of the Air Force story.

The Presidential Aircraft Gallery will allow the museum to relocate and expand one of its most popular galleries, currently located on a controlled-access portion of Wright Patterson Air Force Base and accessible by bus to a small percentage of museum visitors. The fourth building will provide all visitors the opportunity to view this historic collection of presidential aircraft, and walk through four of them, including aircraft used by President Eisenhower, President Truman, President Johnson as well as the Boeing VC-137C used by President Kennedy, also known as SAM (Special Air Mission) 26000 which carried his body back to Washington, D.C. from Dallas after his assassination on Nov. 22, 1963, and served as the location where President Lyndon B. Johnson was sworn in as the new president.

The Research and Development Gallery will also be relocated from the base and offer visitors the opportunity to view the world’s only remaining XB-70 and other aerospace vehicles. The exotic XB-70 could fly three times the speed of sound and was used as a research aircraft for the advanced study of aerodynamics, propulsion and other subjects. Research and development aerospace vehicles represent advances in technological problem solving and will increase the museum’s opportunities to teach STEM themes and principles.

The new Space Gallery will showcase the Space Shuttle exhibit featuring NASA’s first Crew Compartment Trainer (CCT-1), a high-fidelity representation of a space shuttle crew station used primarily for on-orbit crew training and equipment evaluations. As a major exhibit component of that gallery, visitors will be able to walk onto a full-size representation of a NASA space shuttle payload bay and look inside the CCT-1 cockpit and mid-deck areas.

Conceptual plans call for the gallery to also include a Titan IV space launch vehicle, Mercury, Gemini and Apollo spacecraft and many NASA artifacts such as a nose cap assembly, landing gear strut and a variety of astronaut equipment. A range of satellites and related items will showcase the Air Force’s vast reconnaissance, early warning, communications and other space-based capabilities.

Providing airlift remains a major mission of the USAF and it forms a critical part of the Air Force’s ability to maintain global reach. The Global Reach Gallery will give the opportunity to house large aircraft currently in the museum’s collection, such as the C-141 Hanoi Taxi, which carried the first American POWs to freedom from Hanoi, North Vietnam in 1973. The Air Force’s air-lift, aerialomedical evacuation missions and also be explained in this gallery.

According to Hudson, the museum is a valuable Air Force recruitment building that helps maintain and improve a close connection to the public.

“It is vital for the Air Force to have the support of the American people, along with those from around the world,” Hudson said. “As the public’s window to the Air Force, more than one million visitors come to the museum each year, and another 3.5 million people visit online through the museum’s website and virtual tour to learn about the mission, history and evolving capabilities of America’s Air Force.”

New MUSEUM, page 11
The Air Force Museum Foundation recently gifted the funds necessary to begin construction of the building and will continue fundraising toward their campaign goal of $46 million, which would provide additional options and amenities for the building.

Since its inception, the Foundation has contributed more than $85.6 million for museum construction, expansion and facility upgrades. Retired Lt. Gen. Richard V. Reynolds, chairman of the Foundation’s Board of Managers, said it’s great to finally see the building turn into a reality, but the job of fundraising will not end.

“The Air Force Museum Foundation, Inc. was established in 1960 as a philanthropic, non-profit organization to assist the Air Force in the development and expansion of the facilities of the National Museum of the United States Air Force, and to undertake and advance programs and activities supporting the museum. The Foundation raises funds through its membership program, the Air Force Museum Theatre, Museum Store, flight simulators and Valkyrie Café, as well as from direct donations. The National Museum of the United States Air Force, located at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, Ohio, is the service’s national institution for preserving and presenting the Air Force story from the beginning of military flight to today’s war on terrorism. It is free to the public and features more than 360 aerospace vehicles and missiles and thousands of artifacts amid more than 17 acres of indoor exhibit space. Each year more than one million visitors from around the world come to the museum. For more information, visit www.national-museum.af.mil.

Did you know ODR now has disc golf? Disc golf is a flying disc game in which individual players throw a flying disc at a target. Much like golf, the object of the game is to traverse a course from beginning to end in the fewest number of throws of the disc. The Arnold AFB ODR course targets are portable so course location may change. Initial plans are to begin in the softball outfield behind the ODR building. Players may play free with their own discs or rent discs from ODR for $1 each. There are different sizes and weights of discs much like different clubs in golf to better serve the needs of the target distance. For more information on disc golf call ODR at 454-6084.

Reservation Policies

• Operates year round.
• The Services insert to the High Mach is designed to inform our customers of events and specials in the holiday season.
• The Services Conference, which is not part of the Government, which is a private organization which is not part of the Department of Defense or any of its components, and has no governmental status.
