AEDC Commander, Col. Raymond Toth is providing periodic updates on AEDC’s Transition. Col. Raymond Toth remarks, “The ACC AMIC centrally-managed contract transitioning to AEDC. I understand the differences and challenges change requires, but it’s vitally important to me, your family, and your co-workers that you stay focused on completing your piece of our mission safely. Our workplace has inherent hazards which require us all to keep our head in the game. Welcome to my first installment of “What’s the Buzz?” The High Mach will provide periodic updates on AEDC’s transition. For the top three items,” he said. “We were asked to draft and submit several for possible inclusion in the Source Selection efforts to the entire workforce via email and video messages called “What’s the Buzz?”. We will print those messages and transcripts in a series titled “Revolutionary Change”. Additionally, Toth’s messages and other information can be found online at www.arnold.af.mil/transition/。”

PACIFIC ARENA, Calif. — The Air Force is starting a new national campaign focused on a lifestyle of healthy eating and physical activity as part of its mission to reduce obesity and improve the fitness of service members.

The campaign is called “Every Day Counts” and is driven by the desire of service members to make a personal commitment to improve their health and well-being — from eating healthier to getting more exercise. The campaign will run through the end of the year.

The Air Force will implement the campaign by offering a series of challenges targeting diet, nutrition and physical activity.

The campaign will focus on traditional and innovative methods to educate service members on the benefits of healthy food and physical activity and to encourage them to adopt healthy habits and add new behaviors to their lives.

“Clearly our service members need to be able to perform their duties to the best of their abilities,” said Col. Gary Ingle, director of the Health Promotion and Training Division at Air Mobility Command. “So we need to get them ready to go now and into the future.”

Some of the healthy behavior changes the Air Force will promote during the campaign include knowing what foods to eat, understanding how to make healthier choices and adding regular physical activity into their lives.

To help with these changes, the Air Force is offering several interactive challenges to service members in various locations around the world.

“By challenging service members to change their behavior we are giving them something positive to focus on,” said Maj. Gen. Robert Miller, the Air Force’s assistant chief of staff for operations. “We are taking an active role in supporting health, safety and fitness.”

The bottom line is that the Air Force wants service members to be fit, healthy and strong.

“Health and well-being are critically important to our mission, our readiness and our ability to accomplish our tasks,” said Maj. Gen. Mike Sisco, chief of the Air Force’s Health Services Agency. “So this campaign will help us achieve that goal.”

The campaign is also intended to build on the momentum generated by the Air Force’s concurrent efforts to foster a culture of health and fitness, such as its personal fitness program, nutrition policies at dining facilities, and weight control programs available in the Armed Forcesapp. These programs are designed to educate, motivate and provide the tools necessary for service members to make life-long changes that will improve their health.

Air Force focuses on sustainability this Earth Day

AEDC Contributing Writer

This April 22 AEDC will join millions of Americans across our nation in celebration of Earth Day. The Air Force has a critical and continuous commitment to protecting, conserving and restoring the environment. As members of the U.S. military, we are challenged to explore and implement new strategies that maintain sustainability both at home and at work, and to find new ways to make the world a better place.

“The American people have reason to take pride in the actions of their government in pursuit of environmental stewardship,” said AEDC Commander Col. Raymond Toth, also as a member of the Army workforce.

Team AEDC. Over the past year, I tried various methods to reduce paper, protect our natural environment and improve the quality of life, but while the remaining three stages of the process were simple and easy to implement and manage.

Today I want to discuss our future, and I want to focus on our customers’ needs, both new and in the future, we must continue to take actions to change our approaches to the work environment. Col. Raymond Toth, as a member of the Army workforce.

For these efforts to be effective, we need to continue to bring our customers into the fold. What’s working? What’s not working? How can we improve?

"The ACC’s efforts to promote the critical research and development of Arnold Engineering Development Complex (AEDC) have reaped dividends across our district and our state,” Congressman Black said. “I am grateful for my close working relationship with the Arnold Community Council and the leadership of the ACC President Ben Craig. I look forward to their visit each year.”

Black is the founder and co-chair of the CRTCC. The caucus was formed last year to improve understanding and awareness of the importance of major range and test facility bases across the country.

Walton started his Scout career during his youth living at Fort Knox, Kentucky. In 1975 he was presented the BSA's Outstanding Eagle Scout Award certificate and civilian lapel pin by the TAC Scout Executive Vince Coutons. The Council serves 5,580 youth in 33 European, North African, and Middle Eastern countries. The Outstanding Eagle Scout Award, bestowed by the BSA's National Eagle Scout Association in 2019, is a national award which recognizes Eagle Scouts who have "rendered outstanding contributions and achievements, bringing great honor to the highest rank of the Boy Scouts' program through their personal and professional contributions at the local and regional level."

Walton became the second recipient of this special award in TAC's history. In a grander scale, more than 2 million Scouts who earned the Eagle Scout rank since the first award in 1911, only close to 1,400 have been recognized by the BSA as Distinguished Eagle Scouts nationally while 400 or so are locally recognized as Outstanding Eagle Scouts.

Walton, who was unable to attend the previous year's conference in Europe, was also formally presented the BSA's International Service Award during this year's banquet. The certificate and special uniform item recognize Walton's more than 20 years of promotion of BSA international opportunities as well as providing leadership, advancement and service to a variety of host-nation Scouting efforts in some of those skills in his military career. Walton served in the United States, Republic of Iraq.

"I am extremely surprised and touched," Walton said on his Facebook page later reflecting on the honours. "I was so moved, I didn't even have time to pull out and give my $1.49 speech - but I thank everyone for their support of me and what I try to do in support of Scouting for them!

His $1.49 speech is in reference to a presentation he frequently delivers to churches and civic groups stating the daily cost of Scouting today per boy scout - $540 or so a year. "Millions of us spend close to three times that much on coffee alone," Walton said.

Walton started his American Scouting experiences as a Cub Scout and later Boy Scout with the Ludwigshöhe, Germany based Pack and Troop 63. He later returned overseas as Troop 225, in nearby Pattorolle - part of the Stuttgart, Germany military community - before his family was transferred and Mike registered as a Lone Boy Scout for a few months. After returning to the United States, Walton eventually awarded the Eagle rank as a member of Troop 401, a unit he organized and founded; and Post 294, a communicative arts Explorer Post both at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

Walton later returned to Germany after graduation from college and served as a Scoutmaster, Explorer Advisor and Commissioner in the Goospeppen and later Ludwigshöhe-Kornwestheim military communities. Subsequent returns to the TAC found Mike Walton volunteering his time on the District and local Council levels, and traveling on behalf of the Council to some of the outreachs of that Council to assist and train volunteers unable to come to Germany, Spain, England or Italy.

Walton was first appointed to the TAC's Executive Board in 1985 and served until 1986; he once again served on the council board in 1996-97, 2001-02, and most recently from 2008 to the present. He currently serves on TAC’s advancement, direct service/lone Scouting, and international volunteer teams/committees. Walton took the skills he learned as a Boy Scout and applied them to his leadership, ownership, innovation, and service in a variety of successful stops at the platoon, company, battalion, brigade, command and Army levels. Significant in his Army service were the restoration of a brigade’s worth of computers and printers and handing them to the field to support operations in Bosnia, the development and fielding of specialized postal and courier systems during the first weeks of Operation Desert Storm, the development and execution of the Department of Defense’s media embedding plan during Operations Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom, and his marketing and branding development of “Yellow Ribbon Reintegration Programs” throughout the midwest and southern U.S.

Retired from the Army in early 2011 after “serving the world several times over,” he currently uses some of those skills in his position as an Air Force civilian employee at AEDC in south-central Tennessee.

The recipient of the Bronze Star and Legion of Merit among many awards and decorations from the Departments of Defense and the Army, Mike Walton’s various Scouting awards and recognitions are equally as noteworthy, having been previously honored with the Silver Beaver and the District Award of Merit. Mike Walton became the first official active duty military member to receive AEDC’s Eagle Scout Award and civilian lapel pin. (Photo by Jacqueline Cowan)
AIAA Tennessee Section accepting award nominations

By Raquel March

The American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) Tennessee Section is accepting nominations through April 11 to present annual awards recognizing significant technical accomplishments, outstanding achievements and support to AIAA Section activities.

This solicitation is an opportunity for individuals to recognize colleagues, peers, mentors and co-workers. The award criteria acknowledges the professionals whose specialized skills fabricated design into state-of-the-art precision instrumentation; the engineer whose innovative ideas and analysis approach resulted in significant cost savings and improved data delivery; the administrative support personnel that assisted in organizing AIAA meetings and conferences, and the scientist that directed research efforts which contributed to the understanding of physical phenomenology.

Membership in AIAA is not a requirement for the recipient for two of the award categories: the Glenn Award and the Special Award – and for any of the five award categories, the nominator doesn’t need to be an AIAA member.

The General H.H. Arnold Award is the most prestigious award presented by the AIAA Tennessee Section. The award recognizes outstanding personal contributions to the advancement of aeronautical and astronautical sciences. The work must have been accomplished within the past year and the recipient of this award must be an AIAA member.

The Young Professionals Award recognizes one or more outstanding contributions made by a Young Professional Member, to the advancement of the aerospace profession. These contributions could be to the local community, such as STEM activities, local event organization, local section involvement or significant technical achievements. The contributions do not have to be directly related to AIAA. AIAA defines a Young Professional Member as an AIAA Professional Member who is age 35 or younger.

The Special Award category is presented to recognize outstanding outside individuals who provide significant administrative support and mentoring. AIAA membership is not required for the recipient of this award.

The Booster Award is presented to an AIAA Young Professionals Section member in recognition of outstanding service and support to the Tennessee Section. Nominations should include the following 4 items:

1. Award Category
2. Name and contact information for the nominee
3. Your name and contact information
4. A description of the accomplishment, focusing on the award criteria. The description can be as brief or as detailed as you desire.

Nominations may be submitted to Joe Wehrmeyer, 5099 Schriever Ave., Arnold AFB, TN 37389-9013 or by email at joseph.wehrmeyer@arnold.af.mil.

In an effort to bring awareness to the POW/MIA issue, the Federal Women’s Program (FWP) recently sold POW/MIA t-shirts and hoodies. As a result of the funds raised and for Women’s History Month, the FWP presented representatives of the Rolling Thunder Inc., Tennessee Chapter 1, with a check for $1,218.17 in recognition of the POW/MIA issue to educate the public that many Americans prisoners of war were left behind after all processes were taken to help them return to their families. The FWP thanks everyone who purchased a t-shirt or hoodie for contributing to this worthy cause.

When water is rising

Severe flooding has become a fact of life in recent North American seasons. How would you keep safe during a flood emergency? What does it take to be prepared so you can stay safe and protect your home?

Before a flood occurs:

• Make a kit: Store survival supplies, including a first aid kit, canned food and a can opener, bottled water, necessary medications, a radio and flashlight with extra batteries for both. Date the supplies. Store a change of clothes and blankets as well.
• Know several safe routes to high ground from home and work.
• Keep vehicles fueled in case you need to make a quick escape.
• If you live in a flood plain area, check for flooding near you.

In case of a flood:

• Listen to the radio or television for emergency instructions.
• Know several different escape routes in case roadways are flooded or otherwise blocked.
• Don’t attempt to drive through a flooded roadway. Less than two feet of fast-moving water can float most vehicles – even a bus. Floodwaters may hide a damaged roadbed.
• Follow evacuation instructions promptly. If there’s time, turn off electricity, gas service and water before leaving. Post a message indicating where you’ll be.
• If you have to evacuate, your workplace, follow instructions provided with the evacuation notice. You may be tasked to implement shutdown procedures or perform other emergency tasks.
• If you are trapped by rising water in a building, head up stairs and even to the roof if necessary. Wait for rescue; don’t try to swim. Fast-moving water can knock you off your feet.

After the flood:

• Don’t go sightseeing in flooded or storm damaged areas. This puts you in danger and interferes with relief work.
• Don’t touch live electrical equipment in damp areas. Don’t try to turn the gas service back on yourself.
• Report damage such as broken gas lines or fallen power lines as these hazards can be repaired promptly. Before entering a building, ensure it is smoke-free. Vapors have accumulated from gasoline or other flammable materials.
• Assume floodwaters are contaminated with sewage and chemicals. Dispose of food which may have been touched or contaminated by flooding.
• Assum floodwaters are contaminated with sewage and chemicals. Dispose of food which may have been touched or contaminated by flooding. Disinfect all surfaces exposed to floodwater.
• A flood and its aftermath can kill. The danger isn’t only from drowning: electrocution, fires, explosions, building collapse, poisoning from chemical spills and other effects in the aftermath of a flood can kill. Before the waters rise, take time to rehearse how you would stay safe in a flood emergency. What emergency shutdown procedures are required to evacuate your work area in the event of disaster?

The aircraft is the first of 244 F-35s that will eventually be assigned to Luke AFB. Approximately 19 of the aircraft are expected to arrive by the end of 2014, and the remainder of the aircraft should arrive incrementally over the next decade. Following F-35s at Luke (AFB) ensures the long-term viability of our mission and safeguards the long-term presence of the base as a community partner and an economic engine in the West Valley,” Hanna said.

“Having F-35s at Base is planning a formal unveiling ceremony for the jet March 14. The event will be hosted by Undersecretary of the Air Force Eric Fanning, and Gen. Robb, the commander of Air Education and Training Command. Arizona Governor Jan Brewer is expected to be among the speakers at the ceremony. Other elected officials, community leaders and distinguished guests, including representatives from partner air forces, are also expected to attend. First F-35 Lightning II arrives at Luke AFB

LUKE AIR FORCE BASE, Ariz. (AFNS) – Escorting the F-16 Fighting Falcon, Luke Air Force Base’s first F-35 Lightning II arrived at Luke AFB, Tuesday morning, the wingmen escorted their friend, a fellow Airman. The Airman’s family was spared the loss of a loved one. Following the distressed Airman’s hospitalization, the wingmen continued to provide support to their friend.

In another situation, a vigilant wingman observed the medical distress of his friend, a fellow Airman. The Airman’s symptoms seemed life-threatening, and the wingman’s self-aid and buddy care training immediately kicked in. The wingman instructed others to call for emergency assistance while he kept the distressed Airman calm and safe. Because of the life-saving actions of a concerned wingman, the Airman was transported to the local hospital and stabilized. In yet another example, two wingmen were talking to a friend before the weekend, when the individual expressed thoughts of suicide. The wingmen stayed in close contact with the distressed Airman throughout the weekend and secured items which the Airman might have used for self-harm. On Monday morning, the wingmen escorted their friend to the Mental Health Clinic and secured counseling services. Thanks to the wingmen acting on their concern, the distressed Airman was connected with right helping agencies.

“In AFMC, and across the Air Force, we accomplish one mission as a dedicated team committed to our core values and to each other,” Treat said. “Success rests not only on the support of our colleagues and community.”

AFMC has been consciously building the concept of wingman intervention since 2004. The goals are to raise awareness of helping behaviors, increase the number of wingmen to develop the skills and confidence to intervene and most importantly, to ensure the safety and well-being of self and others. If you become aware of situations in which personnel have recognized at-risk behaviors and positively intervened, please contact your local Community Support Coordinator.

AFMC’s goal is to highlight these situations as teachable moments to encourage similar behavior and continue its focus of maintaining a “Culture of Respect and Resiliency.”

The event will be hosted by Undersecretary of the Air Force Eric Fanning, and Gen. Robb, the commander of Air Education and Training Command. The Coffee County Central High School Air Force Junior ROTC (AF-JROTC) CyberPatriot Team, the Tullahoma High School FIRST® Tech Challenge (FTC) Team and the Civil Air Patrol (CAP) Tullahoma Composite Squadron recently visited AEDC to receive recognition for their outstanding efforts in STEM programs.

The Coffee County Central High School AF-JROTC CyberPatriot Team awarded first place in Tennessee for a second consecutive year for the National CyberPatriot competition. The Tullahoma Civil Air Patrol also competed in the National CyberPatriot event for the first time this year and was awarded third place among 15 CAP units. Tullahoma High School FTC team, also a first competitor in a STEM event, scrimmaged with Team RPG – another AEDC supported STEM team. The FTC scrimmage provided an opportunity for the groups to practice since there were no Tennessee FTC competitions this year.

AEDC Commander Col. Raymond Toth congratulated the teams on their achievements.

The teams toured the Complex's testing facilities and the AEDC STEM Center.

Services is recognizing active duty military spouses with a “Tour Services” program including free goods/services and a chance to win $50 in Services Bucks. All active duty Air Force military spouses assigned to Arnold will receive a package in the mail containing their “Tour Services” passport and information explaining the program. During the month of May, military spouses visit five Services facilities and participate in a specified activity to receive a stamp in their passport. These include Arnold Golf Course free 18 hole plus cart for two, Arnold Lake service center free dinner for two, Cafe 100 offer free breakfast or lunch for two, Outdoor Recreation free tandem kayak rental for the day (may substituting another rental of equal value) and Fitness Center group class. Once the passport is complete, redeem at the Services Marketing office (now located in Arnold Village, building 3055) to receive $50 in Services Bucks to be used anywhere in Services. Incentives will be given at each facility as you get your passport stamps. This two-week program is open to any military spouse, thank you for being there to support our military active. Military spouse active duty spouses of active duty military only. Contact Servicemembers Marketing at 454-3350 or 454-3371 to obtain your passport package or for more information.
